

Gloria Fernández Lázaro

Graduate in Biology (Autonoma University of Madrid) speciality of zoology in 2007.

Master of Primatology (University of Barcelona) in 2009.

She has developed several primate research in the field of animal welfare and participated in national and European congress.

She has worked in the education department at the Zoo Aquarium of Madrid and since 2006 in the conservation and education departments in Faunia.

Category C in laboratory animal research: responsible for the design and management of animal procedures, issued by the CNIO (National Cancer Research Center) in March 2011.

Member of the group that the Ministry of Environment and Rural and Marine Affairs has contacted to make training courses on the Inspections of Zoos and to disseminate Knowledge on the zoo law requirements concerning welfare of captive populations.

Member of the “E.U/ U.S Animal welfare Science and Regulation research Group” at the Benjamin Franklin Institute in the University of Alcalá de Henares, Madrid.